BEKANNTMACHUNG.
Nach officiellen Nachrichten in Japan wird zwischen Seiner Majestät dem Kaiser und dem Taikun ausgetrohen und die Beobachtung strenger Neutralität durch nicht Unterzeichneter Gesellschaften Seiner Majestät des Königs von Preussen in Japan die preussischen Unterthanen und Schutzgenossen darauf aufmerksam, dass die Beteiligungen an dem Kriege, selbst in Eigenschaft als Nicht Combatant, die Führung von Kriege- und Transportschiffen, die Zuteilung und Beförderung von Kriegspersonen, Depeschen und zur Kriegsbeförderung gehörigen Gegenständen in preussischen Kaufschiffen für irgend einen der beiden Theile nach dem Grundsatz des Völkerrechts eine Verletzung der Neutralität in sich schliessen und als feindselgehandelt werden können.
Im Militärdienste befindlichen Personen können daher nach Kriegesgebrauch verwendet werden, während die Schiffe und die Transportmittel der Wegnahme der Confection unterliegen, welche auch die Uebrige, etwa vorhandene, Neutralitätshörige Ladung ausgemacht werden.
Die Verletzung der Neutralität durch preussische Unterthanen und Schiffe würde neben ausserdem der Gefahr aussetzen, Ansprüche auf den Schutz der Kaiserlichen Regierung sowie auf die in dem deutsch-japanischen Verträge gesautrten Rechte und Privilegien verlustig zu geben.

GOSSIP FROM THE CONTINENT.

(Morning Herald.)
 Contrary to my expectations, the coffin of the Emperor Maximilian has been again opened to determine once more the identity of the body. A commission was also named to draw up a protocol, giving a statement in legal form of the Emperor's decease. When the coffin was opened the members of the commission saw and expressed their conviction of the authenticity of its contents. The statement was then drawn up and signed. The reason for this seems to be to put an end to the senseless rumours which were in circulation here.

When the lid was raised there was a fine penetrating smell of the gums and other ingredients used in the embalming. The face is of a dark brown color, and the skin shines as with a polish, caused no doubt, by a varnish-like coating which had been applied to it to ensure preservation. The mouth is slightly open. The eyes have been replaced by others of glass, which, if I recollect rightly, are of a different colour to those of the Emperor. They were taken from a figure of the Virgin, because probably there were no others at hand. The forehead has lost much of the hair that originally covered it, and at the sides of the head—at the temples—where the bullets entered, are small patches of velvet. The beard which the Emperor wore long and full is in perfect preservation. It has been combed downwards in a broad line; while the deceased, when living, always had it divided, so that it formed a point on either side. The body is dressed in a black jerkin, the upper part of which is trimmed with velvet. The trousers are of a dark grey cloth. On the hands are black gloves, and the feet are covered with varnished boots. The painful business over, the lid was replaced, the coffin locked, and one key taken possession of by the Grand Marshal of the Household.

The sympathy shown by all the inhabitants of Vienna with the fate of the Mexican Emperor was great and sincere. They remembered him of old, and liked him always; his hard fate gave new strength to the former affection. On the walls of the town yesterday, and in the official Evening Gazette, a letter of the Emperor to Dr. Giska was made known. The Emperor's words on such occasions are always fitting, because they are natural, the result of a generous impulse. At the presentation on the 20th of the members of the delegation to his Majesty, the former Honored general, Perezal, was of the number. The Emperor, descending the steps of the throne, spoke to each of the members, and to him who had once been a rebel leader he turned in the most friendly manner and said, "I am glad to see you here." My obedience and my thanks, your Majesty," was the Hungarian general's rejoinder. "I hope," continued the Emperor, "you will get through your task well, and that what you do will be conducive to the general weal." "We shall strive," answered Perezal, "to meet the gracious intentions of your Majesty."

When the battle of Lissa was fought there were on board the Austrian ships a great number of Italians; but they did their duty well, and proved true to the flag under which they were serving. They had identified themselves so thoroughly with Austria and her navy, that they did not even hesitate for a moment. The glory of the service these men had as much at heart as though they had all been born within the Austrian archduchy. That it was so, speaks well for the system pursued in the fleet, for the treatment they received, and for the character of the officers.

A committee of ladies has been formed at Oden and Pesth, to offer to the Queen of Hungary, whose confinement is to take place at the Castle of Godalla, near Pesth, a cradle ornamented with diamonds and precious stones.

The King of Hanover is on the point of leaving Hintzing, near Vienna, for Prague, where he will reside at the Kinsky Palace. It is said that at the fair of Moscow, in Galicia, the Prussian Government bought a large number of costly homes.

The Italia says that the ex-King Francis XI. had recomposed his Court, in provision of an approaching restoration. He had appointed three committees—one for Sicily, under the presidency of Count Ignazio de Capace Pilo; the second for Calabria, presided over by Count Chiaromonte; the third, under the direction of General de Rivers, is to proceed to clandestine enlistments.

The Standard announces that it has received, under cover bearing the Paris post-mark, the first number of a "clandestine" journal, called La République, which it assures us is written with great violence. The Opinion Nationale is to be prosecuted for an article of M. Ferdinand de Lesseps, on the liberal programme of the 19th of January. He said the press was not free; the public prosecutor brings him to book for saying so.

The Russian Credit Foncier has concluded, it is said, with Messrs Rothschild, a contract stipulating the issue by that house of land bonds to the amount of 50 millions of roubles.

In a pamphlet just published, under the title of the "Electoral Mauger," M. Lafre, formerly representative of the Pyrénées Orientales, lets us into some pretty secrets concerning two elections for the Council-General of that department, recently submitted to the Council of the Prefecture, which has annulled one of them. The following are some choice extracts from the investigation.

"7th Witness.—An electoral agent presented himself with a bottle in hand, and, as he gave himself out as a man of orders, he said, 'If you do not range yourself on the side of the party of orders, blood will flow in the streets like the wine from this bottle.' I found accounts amounting to 3000fr. or 4000fr. in one cafe alone for drink supplied by order of the committee."

"18th Witness.—I was offered ten francs to vote for M. Y. My son said to me, 'Don't be a fool; take the money; you can vote as you like afterwards.'"

"19th Witness.—Five francs were offered to me for my electoral card. I replied, 'That's not worth the risk; you must give me 10 francs at least.'"

"34th Witness.—I had said that I would vote if they gave me 20 francs. The agent put the voting paper and a piece of five francs in my hand. When I saw that he had only given me five francs, I made a noise."

"37th Witness.—I told them that if they gave me the voting paper in one hand and the money in the other I would consent."

"38th Witness.—I was told that if I voted for M. Y., we should have dancing and drinking without paying. Wherever I went I drank without paying. One night, in particular, I took eight glasses of grog."

"39th Witness.—I was asked if I would vote; I replied yes, but that I must have a new suit of clothes.

 A Brussels journal states that a petition discussed in the French Senate prayed the Imperial government to apply to the Belgian government to remove the lion surmounting the mound which commemorates the battle of Waterloo. A M. Jules Bertin, the designer of the monument of Ambiorix, proposes that the lion, an emblem of sanguinary struggles, shall be replaced by a colossal statue of peace, which, placed upon a sphere and supported by all the nations of the world, should be a true symbol of the dearest aspirations of the nineteenth century and of the reconciliation of men of all races—"a monument," as he says, "of the Holy Alliance of peoples united in the one feeling of brotherhood and civilization." A voluntary subscription is proposed to be started for the purpose of carrying out the idea.

THE LEGAL OBLIGATIONS OF BANKERS TO SECRET.

(Morning Herald.)
 The Court of Exchequer pronounced a decision the other day which will take many people somewhat by surprise. In the case of "Hardy v. Veney," the plaintiff, a customer of a bank at Huntingdon, complained that the defendant had improperly disclosed the state of his account to a third person, whereby he had been seriously injured in credit and circumstances. It was proved that the account was not exactly in the state which either banker or depositor greatly likes. Permission had been given to overdrew to the extent of 150*l.*; and not only had this limit been reached, but 70*l.* more was standing on the wrong side. Had it been a question simply of refusing payment of Mr. Hardy's cheques no one could have said that the bankers were not perfectly justified in doing so. At while the account was in this condition, the plaintiff was negotiating with a Mr. Mutton with a view to a partnership. For what reason, or in what way, did not clearly appear, but it did so happen that one of the bank's officials sent to inquire whether Mr. Mutton would become surety for the plaintiff's debt of 70*l.* As was not very surprising, Mr. Mutton declined to accept this responsibility, and ultimately, the plaintiff brought an action for the injury he had sustained through this disclosure of his affairs. But he has failed not only in his appeal to our legal tribunals. A jury at Cambridge found against him on the question of fact, believing that the bankers had given information under circumstances which justified them in so doing. Dissatisfied with this verdict, Mr. Hardy carried his case before the Barons of the Exchequer contending that, as the bankers had been guilty of a dereliction of duty, he was, at any rate, entitled to nominal damages. Their lordships however, took a totally different view, discharging the plaintiff's rule for a new trial, and leaving the defendants in possession both of the spoils and honour of war.

Considering how greatly the commercial community are compelled to trust their bankers with the knowledge of their affairs, at will at first sight appear surprising that a court of law should in effect have said that they are in no way legally bound to respect the confidence reposed in them. It is we think, fairly arguable that the customer who entrusts money in a banker's hands implicitly contracts for the strict observance of that secrecy which is certainly an ordinary, and which is generally deemed an essential, ingredient in every bargain made between parties in such relations. The banker derives a benefit from being the custodian of the customer's money, when the balances are good, and this may very fairly be deemed an equivalent for keeping his account secret when there are no funds in hand. The merits of the particular case are comparatively unimportant, but the general principle might involve somewhat serious consequences, if it were not perfectly certain that in such matters self-interest is the surest safeguard. No banker would be so blind as not to see that living up to his privilege of publishing all he knew would be likely to get him into serious scrapes, and would be certain to involve him in grave discredit. To make a disclosure as the defendants in the case under notice did, "on a justifiable and reasonable occasion," is not only excusable, but laudable. To make such a disclosure, recklessly and wantonly, would be in the highest degree mischievous and consumable. But without expressly deciding, the judges appear to lean towards the doctrine that the banker's obligation to keep silence is not a legal, but a moral one. To disregard that obligation may be very improper, but it is not such a piece of wrong-doing as will give the party injured a right to bring an action with the hope of getting damages. There may be an offence, but it is an offence against a conventional and not a legal rule—a breach of a duty which the law will not enforce, and for which, therefore, the plaintiff cannot recover. And, perhaps, on the whole, it is as well that it should be so. The high standard of honour by which the members of the banking fraternity are animated is a sufficient guarantee for their abstinence from any course of which the public could justly complain; while on the other hand, the judicial recognition of the rule for which the plaintiff contended would be fraught with inconvenient consequences, and would tend greatly to embarrass and hamper those who have daily to deal with the most important and extensive commercial operations.

A HAUNTED HOUSE.

Since the middle of last October a very singular system of precaution has been going on in Kensington, which has hitherto baffled all attempts to discover the author, or the means by which the annoyance complained of is effected. Some years ago it would have been put down to a ghost or perhaps to his Satanic Majesty himself, but since the great spiritualistic bubble of the Brothers Davenport has burst, there is nothing left but to puzzle on till the trick, clever as it may be, is found out. Unfortunately, in the present case the trick, though clever, is becoming cruel and heartless.

In a small house, about twenty yards from the main road, live an old lady, 84 years of age, and her daughter, with one servant. They have lived in the same house for nearly twenty years without any annoyance, but for the last few months they are being constantly troubled by a sharp, loud knocking upon the panel of the street-door. Upon opening the door, however quickly, no sign of any one is to be discovered. No sooner are the ladies quietly settled again than rap-rap-rap! comes upon the door. And this is repeated at irregular intervals through the evening. For some time it was attributed to some young imp of school boys, who are always ready for mischief, and but little notice was taken of it; but the continuance of what was only annoying became at last a serious nuisance. The most minute efforts were made without success to "catch" the offenders, but until a few nights ago the attacks were so arranged as never to take place in the presence of male visitors; consequently the ladies received much pity, but little sympathy, from their friends. After a time they became nervous, and at last really frightened. On Thursday evening a gentleman, the son of the old lady, called, and found them quite ill from nervous excitement, and was comforting them as well as he could, when a quick rap-rap-rap! at the front door made him jump up. In two seconds he was at the door, rushed out, looking in every direction without discovering a sound or a trace of any human being in any of the adjacent roads. Then, for the first time, he was able to understand from what his mother and sister had suffered, and set to work to examine the approaches to the door inside and out, and to solve the mystery, if possible. No sooner had he gone back to the little dining-room and placed a chair in the open doorway with a big stick handy to "trounce" the perpetrator the next time, and begun to discuss what it was, than rap-rap-rap! sent him flying out into the street to the astonishment of a passing cabman, who must have thought a madman had just escaped his keeper. This happened four or five times more; in fact, only ceased about a quarter to eleven. He went round to the police-station and had an officer put on special duty opposite the house for the next day, and spent the following morning in calling upon the neighbours and carefully examining the gardens and walls which abutted upon the "haunted" house. Not a mark of any sort was to be found, and the case was a mystery. In the course of some quiet evenings he had just ceased his device could the door have been reached from any point but right in front of the street. There is no cellar or drain under the house. The more carefully the examination was continued the greater the mystery appeared. In the evening he took a friend down with him, and two more of his friends looked in later. The ladies were found in a painful state of nervous fright, as the nuisance had already been going on, and the maid-servant was crying. Altogether it was a scene of misery. In the course of conversation the following facts came out. It began on a Friday, the 18th of October, and has never missed a Friday since then. It has never been heard on Sunday, seldom on Saturday. Never before the gas lamps are lit, never after eleven. Just as all were talking at once, rap-rap-rap! In an instant all four gentlemen were in the front garden; the policeman was quietly standing opposite the door; the lady of the house was watching the policeman from her position, and another gentleman from the back. All declared that not a living creature had been near the house for at least a quarter of an hour. The whole thing seems inexplicable, and has created quite a sensation in the neighbourhood. The cruel part of the trick is the effect produced upon the venerable lady, whose age makes a change of residence a serious difficulty, and whose nerves are likely to give way altogether if some means cannot be devised to put a stop to the annoyance. The police are doing their best to discover the plot, but hitherto without success.—Morning Herald, Jan. 23.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mr. Dickens in America.—Mr. Charles Dickens evidently has confidence in the American 520 bonds. Mr. Dolby, his agent, has been in Wall Street lately, investing considerable sums in these bonds—the profits he has already secured from his American readings. His welcome is as enthusiastic as ever, and all the seats for every reading are as eagerly as sold. He has covered the largest hall in the country for an interminable period with admiring listeners, and were he to stay five years in America, could earn at least 8000 dollars not profit every week. Mr. Dickens himself is pleased with the welcome given him, and says it has surpassed his most extravagant expectations. It is stated that he is overwhelmed with requests for his autograph. He deals with them summarily, however. Applicants receive a prompt answer, saying, "To comply with your request would not be reasonably possible." It is said that to envelope, direct, and mail these replies, the services of three secretaries are constantly required. At New York, on the last night of the Old Year, Mr. Dickens read "David Copperfield" and "Bob Sawyer's Party" to a large and brilliant audience. At the close, Mr. Dickens stepped to the front and said, "Ladies and gentlemen, I wish you from now on to have a happy, happy New Year." This is the only speech Mr. Dickens has made in America.

The Emperor and the Painters.—The Emperor has received at the Tuileries, in the Salle des Mirroirs, a reputation of 22 from the men employed in the printing-house of M. Paul Dupont. They came to present an address of thanks, signed by all their fellow-workmen, to the number of 1100, on the promotion of the head of the establishment to the rank of Officer in the Legion of Honour. His Majesty, after listening to the address when read by one of the deputies, let us into some pretty secrets concerning two elections for the Council-General of that department, recently submitted to the Council of the Prefecture, which has annulled one of them. The following are some choice extracts from the investigation.

"7th Witness.—An electoral agent presented himself with a bottle in hand, and, as he gave himself out as a man of orders, he said, 'If you do not range yourself on the side of the party of orders, blood will flow in the streets like the wine from this bottle.'
